Judge Landis May Throw

Still in Doubt as to Legal Right to Render Decision in the Baseball Injunction

MILLER PUTS ONE ACROSS

Chicago, Jan. 22 -Organized baseball cored heavily in Judge Landis' court tolay, when it termed the Federal League meddler and turned reformer only after had been repulsed.

George Wharton Pepper, the Philadel-hia attorney retained by the National cague, constantly referred to the meddling of the third organization in his concluding statements. George W. Miller, retained by the American League, and who was addressing the court at the neon recess, was the one who declared that the Foderals saw the ills of organized baseball only when the latter falled to welcome the Gilmore band.

That baseball was not commerce, cer-tainly not of the interstate brand, and since nothing else of a Federal nature eague prayed for an injunction that its

Judge Landis today was still in doubt as to his legal right to render a decision. He was not convinced that it was a matto be brought up in a Federal court, d there is a possibility that he will st the whole case out of his court.

This fact was brought out yesterday

The present suit, according to man baseball writers, develops this new angle to organized baseball's form of contract. No such thing. The writer has pointe out in these columns time and again that the new form of contract was absolutely binding, and that every player Washington club last spring affixed his name to such an instrument. Take the case of Walter Johnson for
